

DEDICATE STONE AT THEAL CENTRE

Ceremony at $5,000,000 Institution for Incurables; Score Anti-Semitism.

Close to $25,000 was raised yesterday at the dedication of the cornerstone for the new Jewish sanitarium for incurables, now under construction at Rutland rd. and Utica ave. The honor of having one's name preserved on the parchment in metallic boxes in the cornerstones was auctioned off by George M. Curtis, jr. Harry M. Peyster, counsel of the State Tax Department, presided, and addresses were given by Rabbi Louis Gross, of Union Temple; Rabbi I. Soddan, and others.

Names placed in the first cornerstone were: Jacob H. Cohen, who bid $750; Louis Levy, $550; Abraham S. Singer, $500; Mrs. Max Blumberg, $350; Mrs. Sophie Holzman, $350, contributed by her son, and Mr. Curtis, who bid $250.

In the second cornerstone were placed the names of Mr. and Mrs. A. Goldschmidt, $400; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Fisher, $150; Mr. and Mrs. John Klar, $800; Mrs. Sarah Stecker, Mrs. Minnie Penemone and J. Powers, $150, and Abraham Posner.

Reference to the alleged Kings County Hospital anti-Semitic feeling was made by many of the speakers, anti-Semitic feeling alleged to be existing serving as an argument for generous support of the Jewish institution, where the incurably ill may have their sufferings and hardships alleviated to some extent by kosher food and religious and racial atmosphere likely to make them feel more at ease.

Jews Need Own Place.

Rabbi Soddan, speaking in Jewish, said that, irrespective of the hazing outrages in Kings County Hospital and the unsatisfactory treatment given to Jewish patients there, a Jewish home for Jewish incurables was a great need in any event. He blessed the undertaking and closed the ceremonies with the Schecheyona, or dedicatory prayer.

"I don't want to say anything to inflame your minds," said Rabbi Gross. "That thing over there in Kings County Hospital is not a Jewish question. It's an American question. What we are doing here today is to bless ourselves. The so-called chronic department of Kings County Hospital is a disgrace, not only to the community, but especially to the Jews." Brooklyn, he pointed out, was the largest Jewish community in the world, a community of a million.

"This Is Our Answer"

Rabbi Gross said he had evidence in his pocket that was very strong against the existing conditions. "This is our answer to the K. C. H.," he said, "this Jewish home that we are going to dedicate. Until conditions are changed, I don't want any Jews to go to Kings County Hospital even if we do have to pay the bill."

"This new home for incurables is our answer to the hydra-headed monster of anti-Semitism. We are going to make it clear that this is America, and not Russia."

Max Blumberg, president of the sanitarium, said he had visited Kings County Hospital and found the Jewish patients were not well treated. They did not have the kind of food they desired or the atmosphere likely to make them contented.

State Senator Love said it was the duty of every Jew to help a movement to take care of the Jewish sick. Jewish patients should not be left in Kings County Hospital.

Federal Judge Grover Moscovitz, Rabbi Barack, Judge Gelsmar and Judge Algoner Nova, president of the Brooklyn Hebrew Orphans' Asylum, also spoke.

Judge Moscovitz said the Jews in America ought to contribute gladly to take care of their sick, because of the comparative freedom here enjoyed. In Russia or in some other countries the Jews were taxed for even breathing, he said.

Mr. Peyster commended Mr. Curtis for his generous support of a Jewish charity. Mr. Curtis replied that he was an American in religion, the American religion teaching fairness and liberty for all; the protection of the weak, the healing of the sick and an equal opportunity for all. He had a right to speak as an American, he said, because his people came to America in 1655.

Read Jewish Poem.

Morris Rosenfeld's poem, "The Historical Burden," was impressively recited by the Jewish actress, Mrs. Gelicka Belawsky, and Miss Bessie Lippman sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

The sanitarium will be a $500,000 building, but on account of many donations of material and furnishings the actual money required is not more than half that amount. Larger contributions of money to date, including subscriptions yesterday, include the following: Jacob H. Cohen, $1,000; Isaac Levin, $1,000; B. Benenson, $1,000; Markel

WIFE LEADS AFFRAY TO FREE PRISONER

Tears Officer's Uniform to Shreds as He Battles Mob in Drug Store.

Knives were drawn in a mob which attempted last night to take a prisoner from Patrolman Harry Wolf, of the Liberty ave. station, whom he had arrested for disorderly conduct.

Despite a furious battle waged by the prisoner's wife who tore the policeman's uniform, he held the crowd at bay in a drug store at the corner of Montauk and Pitkin aves. until police reinforcements arrived.

The disturbance began when the prisoner, who gave his name as Stephen Angellio, 23, a father of 904 Glenmore ave., chased an unidentified man from a moving picture theatre to the street after he had insulted his wife. When Angellio and several friends attempted to return to the theatre they were denied admission.

Patrolman Wolf placed Angellio under arrest on a charge of disorderly conduct. He held him in the drug store to await the arrival of the police patrol. Determined to free the man, about 20 friends demanded the policeman release him. Wolf held them at bay with his night stick until other police arrived.

During the rioting Harry Schnebbe, of 860 Belmont ave., aided the policeman, caused the arrest of Frank Fortes, of 138 McKinley ave., on a charge of attempted felonious assault. Fortes and several others had drawn knives during the affray, Schnebbe said. Mrs. Angellio was also arrested on a disorderly conduct charge.

ALLEGED THIEF'S KIN FLED

Brother-in-Law Accused of Receiving Stolen Goods.

William Saulino, 35, of 416 Clinton st., Hoboken, was held in $2,500 bail for the action of the Federal Grand Jury on receiving stolen goods. He was arraigned today before U. S. Commissioner Edward R. Stanton in Hoboken.

Saulino was arrested yesterday. Recently his brother-in-law, Chester Jordan, 25, of 518 Adams st., Hoboken, was arrested in Long Island City, Queens, on a charge of stealing $160 worth of silk stockings from an interstate shipment at the American Railway Express Company terminal in the Pennsylvania Railroad yards, Long Island City, where he is employed.

The stockings, according to the police, were found in Saulino's home.

and Rosen, $500; Isaac and Moe Parchevsky, $5,000; Flatbush Women's Auxiliary, $5,000; Mrs. Cohen, mother of J. H. Cohen, $25; Young People's Auxiliary, $2,000, and pledge of $2,000 annually; Mr. and Mrs. Ginsberg, $350.

A three-story building was originally planned, but it has since been decided to build four stories.

Officers of the sanitarium are: Max Blumberg, president; Dr. A. Posner, treasurer; Jacob H. Cohen, executive secretary; Mrs. H. Elowsky, Bernard Lubovitz, Max H. Lubin and Mrs. Charles Rosenthal, vice presidents.

On the building committee are Max Blumberg, chairman; Jacob Penemone, vice chairman; Mrs. S. Chasen, Jacob H. Cohen, Reuben Cooperstein, Mrs. E. Elowsky, Isaac Friedman, Simeon Glickman, Leonard B. Kaufman, B. Lebovitz, M. E. Lubin, Dr. A. Posner, Morris Walter, Nathan Penemone and Joseph Aaron.
